TRUMP OUSTS MCMASTER, TAPS BOLTON AS ADVISER

President Donald Trump on Thursday chose as his new national security adviser John Bolton, a hawk who has advocated using military force against Iran and North Korea and who has taken a hard line against Russia. Trump said in a tweet that Bolton would replace H.R. McMaster, his current national security adviser. Bolton, 69, a polarizing figure in Washington foreign policy circles, becomes Trump's third national security adviser in 14 months. Bolton joins a Trump national security team that, with the planned replacement of Secretary of State Rex Tillerson by CIA chief Mike Pompeo, is increasingly populated by figures who share Trump's penchant for exercising U.S. power unilaterally. In recent years, as a conservative media commentator, Bolton has advocated headline positions on stopping Pyongyang from getting nuclear weapons.

CHINA STRIKES BACK IN TRADE SPAT WITH TARIFFS

China unveiled plans on Thursday to impose tariffs on up to $3 billion of U.S. imports in retaliation against U.S. tariffs on Chinese steel and aluminum products, as the world's two largest economies stood on the brink of a trade war. China was considering a 15 percent tariff on U.S. products including dried fruit, wine and steel pipes and a 25 percent tariff on pork products and recycled aluminum, the commerce ministry said in a statement on its website. China has assembled a list of 128 U.S. products in total that could be targeted if the two countries are unable to reach an agreement on trade issues, the ministry added. President Donald Trump signed a presidential memorandum on Thursday targeting up to $60 billion in Chinese goods with tariffs, but only after a 30-day consultation period that starts once a list is published.

EXPLOSION RATTLES LOWER MANHATTAN

The sound of a massive explosion rocked Manhattan's Financial District Thursday afternoon, causing alarm and at least one minor injury. The boom rang out around 4:15 p.m. on Nassau Street between Liberty Street and Maiden Lane alongside the Federal Reserve building.

FDNY officials said a manhole cover blew, and ConEd said they got reports of a smoking transformer. Startled New Yorkers ran from the area immediately after the blast. Police and fire officials taped off the surrounding streets. A security official at the Equitable Building nearby said there was no immediate threat or cause for alarm. Witnesses used Citizen App to document what unfolded after the explosion, with onlookers claiming a vehicle had been damaged.

Tania Santiago heard "what sounded like an explosion or a piece of metal being dropped" from her office on the 29th floor of 1 Liberty Street. MORGAN ROUSSEAU, NIKKI M. MASCAU

GOVERNMENT FUNDING BILL HITS SNAG IN SENATE

Legislation to fund the government beyond Friday, which was on a fast track toward passage by the U.S. Congress, hit a bump on Thursday as Republican Senator Rand Paul employed procedural delays while he hunkered down to read the 2,232-page tome. Earlier on Thursday, Republican leaders rushed the $1.3 trillion bill, which would fund the government until Oct. 1, through the House of Representatives. Passage there kicked the action over to the Senate. Lawmakers were racing against a midnight Friday deadline, when current federal funding expires, in hope of avoiding a third partial government shutdown this year. While Paul so far was alone among 100 senators in acting on his objections to the legislation, conservative Republicans in both house of Congress were fuming over it.

NEW YORK CITY PROBES KUSHNER BUILDINGS

A New York City regulator is investigating 13 buildings controlled by a company formerly run by Jared Kushner, President Donald Trump's son-in-law and senior advisor, over possible "illegal activity" related to work permits, according to public filings. The online filings by the Department of Buildings show it is investigating the possibility of "false filing" on applications by Kushner Companies for construction work.

The documents involve properties in Brooklyn and Manhattan. News of the agency's probe comes two days after a tenants' rights group and a city councilman said they had found evidence that Kushner Companies had falsified more than 80 work permits involving 34 buildings. Christine Taylor, a Kushner Companies spokeswoman, said the company valued its tenants and took its legal responsibilities seriously.

March for Our Lives NYC wants Washington to know 'we're voting next'

"It's a nation of students saying we want to be able to go to school safely," said Lula O'Donnell of Hunter College High School.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

As with last week's national school walkouts, thousands of Americans are expected to take part in March for Our Lives on Saturday in cities across the country to protest Congress' inaction on gun violence and mass shootings in schools.

The March 14 walkouts, which marked the one-month anniversary of the shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School that killed 17 people in Parkland, Florida, including students, were inspired by the immediate gun-control activism of the surviving students, who also organized March for Our Lives.

The walkouts, said Hunter College High School student Lula

O'Donnell, "were really impactful and important, but, of course, that wasn't the end to the action we need to be taking," the 17-year-old from Carroll Gardens said.

O'Donnell will join a contingent of Hunter students at March for Our Lives in New York City, a sister march to the main one in Washington.

"The idea of having

"We really have the power to change things."

a march in every major city on this one day at this time that's in solidarity with the victims of Parkland and also in remembrance of the school shootings that have happened the last 20 years and gun violence in general in this country is really important to me," O'Donnell said. "It's a nation of students saying we want to be able to go to school safely."

O'Donnell hopes that March for Our Lives, like the activism of the Parkland survivors who have inspired countless others to join the fight to end gun violence and famously took on lawmakers and the NRA in the weeks since the shooting, sends a very clear message to Washington.

"I hope it sends the message that our voices, even though we're young, are important because we're voting next — and they are the voices that will be the most relevant in a few years," she said. "We really have the power to change things."

"School safety is not a political issue," organizers wrote on Facebook. "There cannot be two sides to doing everything in our power to ensure the lives and futures of children who are at risk of dying when they should be learning, playing and growing. The mission and focus of March for Our Lives is to demand that a comprehensive and effective bill be immediately brought before Congress to address these gun issues. No special interest group, no political agenda is more critical than timely passage of legislation to effectively address the gun violence issues that are rampant in our country."

THREE THINGS TO KNOW AHEAD OF MARCH FOR OUR LIVES NYC

- March for Our Lives will begin Saturday, March 24, at West 72nd Street and Central Park West.
- A rally with speakers will start at 11 a.m., and attendees are asked to begin arriving at 10 a.m.
- Marchers will head south starting at noon, ending at Sixth Avenue and 43rd Street.

Donald Trump's four-day NYC visit cost the NYPD more than $4M

The president came to town in August after the Charlottesville rally and racked up a lot of security costs, according to police documents obtained by CBS.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

President Donald Trump's August visit to New York City caused quite a stir, drawing protestors in droves — and piling huge security costs on the New York Police Department.

That four-day trip, his first back home since taking office and which occurred in the wake of the Charlottesville rally, cost the NYPD nearly $4.6 million, according to documents

BETWEEN $76,436 AND $1.8M
The NYPD's increased costs per day due to Trump, according to records obtained by CBS.

ments obtained by CBS.

Trump was greeted on that trip with thousands of protesters angered by the president's failure to specifically denounce white supremacist groups after violence erupted in Charlottesville.

It was also during this visit, when speaking to reporters about the rally, that Trump made his comment about how there was "blame on both sides" for the event.

Those heightened tensions reportedly led to a need for increased security, racking up the steep bill for NYPD in order for the department to deploy between 128 and 1,917 detectives, captains, lieutenants, officers, sergeants and traffic enforcement officers for every day Trump was in town.

In total, that added up to between $76,436 and $1.8 million per day, according to NYPD records obtained by CBS.

While Trump arrived in the city Aug. 14, officials began prepping for his visit before that.

After Trump was elected but before he was inaugurated, city officials asked the federal government for money to cover the costs of protecting the candidate in his Manhattan home.

NYC spent $24 million protecting Trump Tower and the first family, according to Mayor de Blasio. GETTY IMAGES Congress did provide some additional funding — $20 million for costs incurred between Election Day and Inauguration Day and $41 million for costs after Inauguration Day.

But it's "unclear," CBS reports, whether the costs for the August trip, or others back to New York City, have been reimbursed.

New York City spent $24 million protecting Trump Tower and the first family between Election Day and Trump's inauguration, according to Mayor Bill de Blasio. Last May, city officials said that they anticipated security costs to "increase significantly" whenever the president is in New York City.

National Puppy Day: Four things to think about before bringing a puppy home

While we all likely live for Fridays, some of us are particularly excited about Friday, March 23, which is National Puppy Day.

The day, founded in 2006 by celebrity pet and lifestyle expert Colleen Paige, doesn't just celebrate the magical cuteness of puppies, though.

"National Puppy Day came into existence not only to celebrate puppies, but also to highlight puppies in need of adoption in shelters nationwide and raise awareness of the abuses that are found in puppy mills," said Rachel Maso, a behavior associate with the ASPCA in New York City.

If you're thinking of bringing a puppy or older shelter dog home in celebration of National Puppy Day or in the future, here are some things to think about from Maso.

A life-changing addition

Since puppies are very active and require a lot of time, work and attention to train, "it's important

"Look at your personality ... and how much free time you have" before getting a puppy, says Rachel Maso, an ASPCA behavior associate in NYC. ASPCA/ANITA KESLO EDSON to make sure everyone in your household is on board and understands the commitment and responsibility," Maso said.

Adopt, don't shop

"One of the really important reasons we suggest people adopt dogs is it's a really good way to ensure you're not supporting the puppy mill industry," she explained.

Buying from a dog breeder

If you want to get a dog from a breeder, make sure you can meet both parents "to see what their temperaments are and the conditions they're housed in," Maso said.

About that tail wag...

A common misconception is that a wagging tail equals a happy dog.

"I want people to learn that a wagging tail means the dog is having an emotion — there are all kinds of tail wags," Maso added.

A brisk, high tail wag could mean the dog is tense, while a lower tail moving slowly and loosely means the dog is having fun and a tucked tail indicates a dog is scared. NIKKI M. MASCAU

"I'd been groomed and prepared for this my whole life," Darryl "DMC" McDaniels, co-founder of the iconic rap group Run-DMC, said of his work with MSG's Garden of Dreams Foundation. ALL PHOTOS PROVIDED BY GARDEN OF DREAMS

MSG's Garden of Dreams Foundation makes dreams come true with music

The nonprofit is holding its annual talent show for kids facing obstacles and its first-ever two-part benefit concert at the Beacon Theatre.

nikki.mascali@metro.us

Darryl "DMC" McDaniels may have been a founding member of Run-DMC, one of the most influential hip-hop groups of all time, but it's his role within MSG's Garden of Dreams Foundation that he feels may have been his destiny all along.

In 2000, when he was in his mid-30s, McDaniels found out that he had been an adopted foster child. Learning the long-kept family secret inspired him to talk about his "shocking revelation" at group homes, schools and homeless shelters and do other forms of youth outreach, which eventually led him to Garden of Dreams, a nonprofit that holds more than 500 events each year for kids facing health, domestic, social, economic and other obstacles.

"I had to come on as board member — I'd been groomed and prepared for this my whole life," McDaniels said.

Ever since, McDaniels has been one of the most

After Darryl "DMC" McDaniels found out he was an adopted foster child, he began speaking and doing youth outreach.

Radio City Music Hall on Tuesday.

"I didn't perform at Radio City Music Hall until 1993, when I was almost 30 years old — I tell them I'm so jealous of them," McDaniels said with a laugh. "These kids are just like me, and I always say a kid's situation shouldn't deprive them of opportunities to do the things they love and still be a kid and have life-changing experiences. That's what Garden of Dreams is all about."

McDaniels said his job as talent director isn't hard because "these kids have the 'it' factor."

"We think we're doing great things for these kids, but money couldn't give us the feeling we get from working with these children. My dream has come true," he said, with his voice heavy with emotion.

Before the kids get on stage at Tuesday's talent show, they'll be able to sing and dance along to Friday's Concert for Dreams, the foundation's first-ever benefit concert, which will consist of a kids-only matinee and an evening show for adults, both at the Beacon Theatre. All proceeds will benefit Garden of Dreams.

While the kids' show will also feature Rachel Crow and Grace Vanderwaal, the lineup for both outings will include McDaniels, Matt Nathanson, Gavin De-Graw, Robert Randolph and O.A.R., whose frontman, Marc Roberge, curated Concert for Dreams over the course of 18 months.

"We want to give these kids an experience where they can leave feeling really good," Roberge said. "Their show is intended solely to get these kids dancing and singing songs that they know — and that's it. That way, they can always remember, 'Wow, that was fun. What a great day.'"

O.A.R. is going to open the matinee show with a "really fun medley of hit songs from other artists that kids will know," Roberge said. "What I really want to do is encourage them to sing these songs by Bruno Mars and everyone else."

While McDaniels said that "everybody's crying every minute" of the Garden of Dreams talent show thanks in part to a video shown of the obstacles the performers face,

Roberge hopes the Concert for Dreams "will be more smiles than anything."

"I've had the opportunity to spend some time with these kids, so I've gotten my cries out of the way," he said. "I think the times I get to spend with these kids now has been filling me up and making me really happy and inspired."

A new report questions how much it costs to live within steps of a subway stop. GETTY IMAGES

New data shows how much you save by living farther from the subway

Choosing to live about a 10-minute walk from the train could mean an apartment that's 10 percent cheaper than the median price for your New York City borough, according to RentHop.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Living steps away from a subway stop is every New Yorker's dream, but how much is that morning convenience really worth?

If you're looking for a more affordable apartment in the city, a few more minutes spent walking to the train could mean more money saved on rent. A 10-minute walk to the subway could mean an apartment that's 10 percent cheaper than the median price, according to real estate site RentHop.

The real estate site looked at city data of MTA subway entrances mapped alongside apartment listings, adding in a "buffer" around those stations to represent various distances. Researchers then calculated the median rent of all the apartments within a certain proximity to those entrances.

Overall, apartments that were closest to the train cost 6 to 8 percent more than the median price for that particular borough, and apartments that were the farthest away from a subway entrance cost 8 to 10 percent less.

What counts as close? In most neighborhoods across the city, the most expensive apartments were no more than an eighth, or 0.125, of a mile to the subway.

In Brooklyn, a two-minute walk to the subway translated to a rent that was 8.4 percent higher than the borough median, meaning $3,000 a month instead of $2,768. If you find a place about a 10-minute walk from the train, you might pay around $2,600, 6 percent less than the median price. For about a half-mile away, you'll see an 8 percent cut, for a median rent of $2,550.

In Queens, the pattern is similar: Apartments more than a half-mile from an entrance see a more than 10 percent drop in median price, from $2,470 to $2,200.

Generally, New York City apartments further away than that from the train are cheaper — except in Manhattan. Manhattan is only 2.3 miles long at its widest, so when you're one-third of a mile away from a station in Manhattan, you're near the waterfront, which is prime real estate.

In some instances, it pays to be a bit closer to the train, though, and not just because of convenience.

In the Bronx, rents tend to be cheaper when you're really close to the subway. RentHop experts said this might be because of the smaller sample size available in the Bronx for this kind of data (Staten Island was also omitted from the study due to a small sample size).

Those experts guessed it could also be due to the fact that some trains are aboveground, which means living nearby means dealing with that subway noise. There, you'll have to ask yourself if it's more worth it to be near the train or to (maybe) get a better night's sleep.

THE FUN STARTS HERE

Original Fried Chicken Sandwich at Lil Sweet Chick

Rapper Nas is bringing his favorite fried chicken sandwich to Citi Field. He's an investor in the Brooklyn-born Sweet Chick, which has four restaurants in the city and Los Angeles, but owner John Seymour cooked up a new concept for Mets fans. There's the Spicy Nashville (hot chicken), Chicken & Waffles and the Original Fried, which he's nailed with the deceptively simple combo of lettuce, tomato, pickled onions and herb mayo.

Crispy Chicken Roll at Box Frites

Belgian-style fry stand Box Frites is expanding into the hot dog and sandwich realm, and its Crispy Chicken Roll gets the highest marks: crispy chicken poppers topped with spicy peppers and a Parmesan ranch sauce on a hoagie. Executive chef John Karangis of Union Square Events, which owns Box Frites, rolled up as we were tasting to say, "This was inspired by all the ballpark sandwiches we've loved." Mash-ups can be tricky, but this one works.

The Alpine Brat at Baked Cheese Haus

An outdoor food market favorite comes indoors. Baked Cheese Haus got the call to bring its Wisconsin-made raclette (they've been doing it for 120 years!) to Citi Field, and they've taken a ballpark classic to the next level. The cheese is freshly melted over a thick bratwurst nestled in a French baguette, topped with fresh onions, cornichons and mustard. "It's an old Swiss tradition" that just happens to mesh with what people want at a ballpark, says Jacob Croskey, manager of the Citi Field outpost.

Sausage and Peppers at Pat LaFrieda's Chop House

Leave it to New York's meat man to take the basic sausage and peppers and turn it into a destination dish. An Italian sausage gets swaddled in a blend of sweet bell pepper and Balsamic-roasted onions, then topped off with giant dollops of whipped ricotta.

Eat the Mets

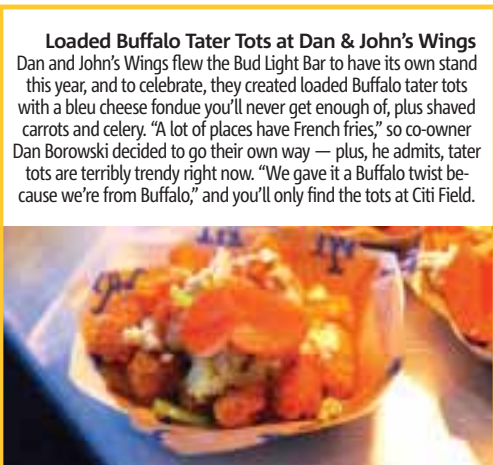

We ate all the new food at Citi Field for the 2018 baseball season and picked the tastiest new bites.

EVA KIS

Hong Kong Egg Waffles at Wowfulls

Citi Field continues expanding its trendy dessert options with Wowfulls, which originally brought Hong Kong's egg waffle ice cream cones and elaborately topped ice cream to Smorgasburg in 2015. Its Strawberry Fields (hah) is made with strawberry cheesecake ice cream and topped with French Toast Crunch cereal, caramel sprinkles, strawberry Pocky sticks and whipped cream.

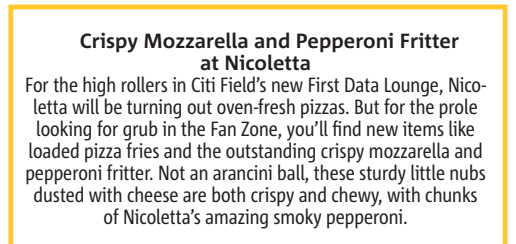

Loaded Buffalo Tater Tots at Dan & John's Wings

Dan and John's Wings flew the Bud Light Bar to have its own stand this year, and to celebrate, they created loaded Buffalo tater tots with a bleu cheese fondue you'll never get enough of, plus shaved carrots and celery. "A lot of places have French fries," so co-owner Dan Borowski decided to go their own way — plus, he admits, tater tots are terribly trendy right now. "We gave it a Buffalo twist because we're from Buffalo," and you'll only find the tots at Citi Field.

Vegan Pizza at Two Boots

Everyone may be jumping on the vegan bandwagon now, but Roberta Pettit would like to point out that, in fact, Two Boots has been serving vegan pies since 1992. This year, they're bringing their best-selling V for Vegan slice to Citi Field, made with artichokes, shiitake mushrooms, red onions, sweet red pepper pesto, basil pesto and non-dairy Daiya cheese. "We brought this in because it's our most popular pie after cheese and pepperoni."

Crispy Mozzarella and Pepperoni Fritter at Nicoletta

For the high rollers in Citi Field's new First Data Lounge, Nicoletta will be turning out oven-fresh pizzas. But for the prole looking for grub in the Fan Zone, you'll find new items like loaded pizza fries and the outstanding crispy mozzarella and pepperoni fritter. Not an arancini ball, these sturdy little nubs dusted with cheese are both crispy and chewy, with chunks of Nicoletta's amazing smoky pepperoni.

What's new at Citi Field for 2018

A swanky new lounge behind home plate, revamped Citi Pavilion and lots more cocktails.

eva.kis@metro.us

Whether winter bows out or not, baseball season starts March 29 — and Citi Field is ready.

The Mets face off against the St. Louis Cardinals at home for their season opener in a stadium that's offering more ways to watch the game than ever before.

"Our fans experience the game differently in 2018," says David Newman, senior vice president of marketing and communications for the Mets.

"These social environments are critical to the growth of our game and this baseball park."

Here's what's new at Citi Field for 2018.

Mr. Met gets the Star Wars treatment. ALL PHOTOS EVA KIS

A more casual option for groups

Citi Pavilion got a major makeover, including its own bar serving complimentary beer, soft drinks and light snacks. The new lounge has tickets for 60 seats — which swivel for a more social experience — and 32 standing-room fans, who have access to high top tables, drink rails and benches.

A brewery inside the ballpark

As of March 25, Citi Field's reputation as a haven for craft beer lovers will grow by an entire brewery. Mikkeller, the Danish brewer beloved by serious beer nerds, got a high-profile boost for their recent Twin Peaks-inspired collaboration with David Lynch. Tucked behind the stadium's right field, the restaurant and taproom will be accessible without a ticket, offering 60 varieties on tap — all made by Mikkeller — and a full menu.

More free swag than ever before

This season, the Mets will give away over 1 million hats, T-shirts, fanny packs, bobbleheads, toys and more to fans on game days, more than they ever have before. Mark your calendars for some of the most coveted items: Build-a-Bear teddy (March 31, first 15,000 fans), Yoenis Cespedes garden gnome (May 5, first 25,000 fans), Home Run Apple Figurine (June 23, first 25,000 fans) and, returning for its second year, the Noah Syndergaard-as-

Thor bobblehead (Aug. 4, 25,000 fans).

Star Wars warps into Queens

The Mets are partnering with Disney again for a Star Wars bobblehead with Mr. Met as Han Solo

Rendering of the First Data Lounge

in the Millennium Falcon with Chewbacca. Be one of the first 25,000 fans on May 19 to get yours.

More specialty liquor

Cocktails continue to muscle in on what used to be solidly beer territory. Jim Beam is expanding its presence at the ballpark after opening the large open-air Bourbon Bar in the Fan Fest zone last season with the Highball Club. Located on the Promenade Level behind home plate, the signature drink will be a machine-made mix of highly carbonated soda and whiskey, served in a subway-tiled lounge.

Also stepping up to the plate is Effen Vodka, which will open a branded bar on the Excelsior Level's third base side.

When players Hit the Sign, fans win

In a new partnership with the New York Lottery, if a Mets player hits a special sign in right field, one lucky fan registered at sny.tv/newyorklottery will win a starting jackpot of $10,000 on opening day. That rises by $5,000 every game a Mets player doesn't hit the sign, for a potential $410,000 jackpot by season's end — so you're rooting for them either way.

● ● ● ○ ○
Sometimes the perfect film comes along at the perfect moment to encapsulate a shift in attitudes. “Roxanne Roxanne” might just be that movie, because it tells the story of the underappreciated rapper Roxanne Shante, who was one of the most talented performers and emcees during the emergence of hip-hop in the early 1980s. Unfortunately, her popularity faded as the genre exploded.

“Roxanne Roxanne” brings Shante and her talents to a brand new audience, though.

Interesting, poignant and timely, “Roxanne Roxanne” has too many of the same tropes and plots of other biopics to really stand out, but is a compelling enough watch.

Metro spoke with Roxanne

GETTY IMAGES

Shante and Chante Adams, who plays her in the biopic, to learn what’s most important about the music movement — and the film. Chante Adams had this to say about Shante: “She had such a big impact on the industry. And I don’t think that people in the industry — and female rappers — know about that. Which is why I’m so excited that people can really learn about her and who paved the way for them. When I asked her about the level that Nicki Minaj and Salt N’ Pepa reached, she was like, ‘We all have jobs in making our way to the top as female rappers. Maybe I held the door open.’”

“Roxanne Roxanne” is released on Netflix on March 23.

“Pacific Rim: Uprising” shakes things the F up

“Uprising” is big, loud, dumb and fun, which is perfectly fine because that’s all that it wants to be, especially as the scene-stealing Charlie Day and gung-ho John Boyega make it so watchable. It becomes clear very quickly why John Boyega is already a movie megastar at just 26 years old.

Not only is he warm and amiable, but then once you dive into a conversation with the “Star Wars: The Last Jedi” actor he’s straight to the point and clearly ambitious. Boyega is keen to mix things up and use it as a power for representation, inclusion and progressiveness.

That’s exactly what Boyega told Metro when we talked about “Pacific Rim: Uprising.” “There’s been a debate for a long time that certain sections of the audience don’t feel included, or represented, in what we all love — entertainment,” he tells Metro. “We’ve had the same sort of person up on screen and same type of world fed to us. And now, I feel as though people have had enough. Working in the industry as an actor and being affected by those projects personally, I’ve always sought out projects that push inclusion forward. That means locating genuine talent, staying away from making it a token movement and just locating more diverse backgrounds so it makes the style and approach to the storytelling unique.”

“Pacific Rim: Uprising” is in theaters on March 23.

“Game Over, Man!” is “Workaholics” ... but turned up a notch

GETTY IMAGES

The “Workaholics” crew feel overstretched and fail to generate the same volume of laughs in their lackluster Netflix comedy, which feels too long and too stupid. The end of “Workaholics” after seven seasons left fans of Blake Anderson, Adam DeVine and Anders Holm’s unique brand of foolishness worried that the increasingly popular trio would never work together again. But here they are.

“Game Over, Man!” is their first feature-length comedy, which revolves around the guys trying to save their video game benefactor after he’s taken hostage by terrorists in a hotel.

It’s basically “Die Hard,” but with way more penis jokes. Metro recently spoke with the “Game Over, Man!” star and writer Anders Holm about the Netflix comedy. “Me and the other guys realized that our favorite episodes of ‘Workaholics’ were the action-orientated episodes,” shares Holm. “Five years ago we started on the script, and we knew that if we were ever going to do a movie we were just going to do that — but turn it up a notch.”

“Game Over, Man!” is released on Netflix on March 23.

The Giants sent two-time Pro Bowl defensive end Jason Pierre-Paul to the Bucs on Thursday. GETTY IMAGES

Giants send Pierre-Paul to Buccaneers

Big Blue sent the veteran defensive end to Tampa for two draft picks.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The New York Giants have traded two-time Pro Bowl defensive end Jason Pierre-Paul and a 2018 fourth-round draft pick to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers for a 2018 third and fourth-round selection, as first reported by ESPN's Adam Schefter.

Pierre-Paul spent eight seasons with the Giants, winning a Super Bowl while compiling 58.5 sacks in 111 games.

The 29-year-old was developing into one of the most dominant pass rushers in the NFL, coming off a 2014 campaign in which he recorded 12.5 sacks. It was the second-highest sack output of his career as he put up 16.5 in 2011, which was just his second in the league.

But a July 4 fireworks incident that cost him the index finger on his right hand brought everything to a screeching halt as Pierre-Paul was limited to just eight games and one sack in 2015. He managed to come back and combine for 15.0 sacks from 2016-2017, earning a four-year, $62 million contract prior to last season.

Financially, the move to trade Pierre-Paul isn't exactly ideal. While it fits the team's bill of becoming more fiscally responsible by getting rid of bad contracts, Pierre-Paul only carried a $2.5 million cap hit and puts $15 million of dead money on the Giants' books.

However, the Giants look to be moving from a 4-3 to a 3-4 defense under new management that includes general manager Dave Gettleman, head coach Pat Shurmur and defensive coordinator James Bettcher, making Pierre-Paul expendable.

For the Buccaneers, they get the pass rusher they were in desperate need of. Last season saw Tampa Bay rank dead-last in the NFL with just 22 sacks, which made getting a sack artist a top priority this offseason.

After unsuccessful attempts to get Michael Bennett from the Seattle Seahawks and Robert Quinn from the Los Angeles Rams, they have just that while providing their newest defensive end with a homecoming of sorts. A University of South Florida alum, Pierre-Paul played his collegiate games at Raymond James Stadium, home of the Buccaneers.

Bradley Chubb in play for Giants after JPP trade?

The Giants offseason of change continued on Thursday when they traded Jason Pierre-Paul to the Buccaneers.

It's a move that helps the team find a fresh start after a dreadful 3-13 season that resulted in the cleaning out of management. Pierre-Paul was entering the second year of a four-year, $62 million deal and became expendable as the Giants move to a 3-4 defensive scheme under new coordinator James Bettcher.

With Pierre-Paul now out of the picture, the Giants' defensive line in that new scheme could consist of Olivier Vernon and Dalvin Tomlinson at the defensive ends with Damon Harrison in the middle.

However, the NFL Draft might provide New York with an alternative, possibly dominant option to add to the defensive end conversation.

With the No. 2 pick in the draft, the Giants have an opportunity to take NC State defensive end Bradley Chubb, the most dominant pass rusher available in this year's draft class.

As a three-year starter, Chubb compiled 25 sacks in 38 games along with 54.5 tackles for a loss, quickly showing his ability to become a disruptive force in the backfield off the edge.

NC State Bradley Chubb is the best defensive prospect in the draft. GETTY IMAGES

He looks the part, standing at 6-foot-4, 269 pounds with long arms used to keep blockers at bay and wrangle in ball carriers. But a strong NFL Combine only further cemented his place as a top-five draft prospect, running a 4.65 40-yard dash, putting up 24 reps on the 225-pound bench press and recording a 36-inch vertical jump, which ranked second among all draft prospects in Indianapolis.

Adding him to the defensive line not only gives the Giants depth should injuries strike of if new general manager Dave Gettleman isn't done shaking up the roster, but he adds the promise of an elite pass rusher joining an organization that has prided itself on defense for most of its existence.

History also suggests the Giants could have some good luck with this pick. The last time they selected No. 2 overall in the draft, they also went defense in 1981. The pick? Lawrence Taylor. JOE PANTORNO

NFL GM: 'Jets did a nice job'

A league general manager spoke with Metro about the Jets' early activity in free agency.

KRISTIAN DYER
sports@metro.us

Mike Maccagnan had the type of offseason he should have had three years ago, lessons learned from the 2015 free agency spending bonanza. It has one league general manager impressed and thinking that the New York Jets have taken a step forward.

The Jets have been one of the winners of the first week of NFL free agency. Whether it is cornerback Trumaine Johnson and linebacker Avery Williamson to bolster the defense or additions on the other side of the ball such as quarterback Teddy Bridgewater, running back Isaiah Crowell or center Spencer Long, there is no denying that the Jets added a lot this offseason.

They just didn't spend big and they didn't necessarily add stars.

Free agency for the Jets clearly lacked the big splash that many fans expected, especially after all the talk and buzz about going big after Kirk Cousins. The Jets didn't pursue the top names in free agency, instead choosing to find value and not headlines with their signings.

It is the polar opposite of 2015 when the Jets went crazy, trading for the likes of Brandon Marshall and signing marquee free agents such as cornerbacks Darrelle Revis and Antonio Cromartie.

One league general manager is impressed as he spoke exclusively

Jets general manager Mike Maccagnan is having a solid offseason. GETTY IMAGES with Metro on the condition of anonymity:

"I thought the Jets did a nice job. They definitely found good value but they added talent across the board. Two years ago was it - maybe it was three [years ago] - they spent all that money. It was almost spending for the sake of spending. Then they had success that one year with [10] wins but it quickly fell apart. This year, I think they got five or six impact starters and they already had a pretty good core. I didn't like them letting their linebacker (Demario Davis) go, I thought he was a good player. I also don't understand bringing in two quarterbacks when they're going to draft one, but I guess they both have health concerns and came cheap so it isn't a bad idea to play the odds because they'll need a bridge for a year for whoever they sign.

They got better and they were smart about it. They have lots of flexibility now and a deeper roster. People are forgetting that they were 5-11 last year but they could have had a couple more. They were in a lot of games. If the kid [quarterback Josh] McCown doesn't go down, they might get one or two more wins. They were close in a bunch of games so I don't think they had to overspend. They let the market settle for a day then got value, they got depth and they got three or four guys on each side of the ball that help them immediately. That's what they needed. With a high draft pick, I think the Jets got a lot better this offseason."

"The kid McCown" turns 39-years old in July for what it's worth.

But just how much better did the Jets get? Maybe not quite postseason material but this GM thinks that Maccagnan's team isn't far off.

"Listen, it is still a tough division. New England is not going anywhere. But I think the Jets maybe leaped above everyone else. They're better than the [Buffalo] Bills and I think better than the [Miami] Dolphins. The Jets are deeper, more balanced now than both. The additions this year - they get them above those teams in the [AFC] East. They're top half in the conference now and growing," the general manager said.

"Do they make the playoffs? Not sure they are there yet. Do I think they can be .500? I really do. Maybe win 10 games and be in the hunt then take a leap forward next year."

Aries Don't labor over what might have been. A good outlook will help you recognize what's possible. Take responsibility for your future. Choose to be productive.

Taurus Play to win. No matter what you do, it's important to give your all and make your mark. You'll be judged by your effort and your ability to get along with others.

Gemini Matters pertaining to personal finance or legal or medical issues should not be ignored. A detailed look will reveal a change that can save you time and money.

Cancer Strike up a dialogue that will help you bring matters of concern to the forefront. Setting up new guidelines will enrich a relationship that has been waning.

Leo An opportunity that someone offers you will not turn out to be as lavish as it appears. Don't fall for hype when you should be focused on your responsibilities.

Virgo Making travel plans, attending business meetings and broadening your awareness regarding projects you want to pursue should be on your agenda.

Libra Make sure you are on the same page as the people you are dealing with today. Overspending to please someone or to keep the peace will only make matters worse.

Scorpio An opportunity to visit someone you find interesting or informative will also help you make a decision that can change how or where you live or what you pursue.

Sagittarius Don't wait for someone to complain. If changes need to be made at home or to a relationship, make the effort. Love and romance will improve your life.

Capricorn Don't feel you must share your intentions with anyone prying into your personal affairs. Preparation will help prevent a friend, from trying to dismantle your plans.

Aquarius Anyone trying to entice you into doing something that isn't good for you should be pushed aside. Be firm and spend time with friends who have better morals.

Pisces Look for a solution that has worked in other situations. A couple of alterations to the way you have done things in the past will prove to be successful. EUGENIA LAST
